FHHS to startFHHS Article PrizeLecture SeriesAward

The Forum for the History of the Human Sciences, an interest group affiliated with the History of Science Society, has launched a distinguished lecture series starting at this year's History of Science Society Meeting in Minneapolis, MN (3-6 November, 2005).

The inaugural distinguished lecture of this series will be presented by George W. Stocking, Stein-Freiler Distinguished Service Professor Emeritus of Anthropology and in the Committee on Conceptual Foundations of Science at the University of Chicago. Stocking conducts research on the history of anthropology, focusing recently on anthropology in the United States during the post-World War II period. His publications include: Victorian Anthropology (1987); Editor, Colonial Situations: Essays on the Contextualization of Ethnographic Knowledge. History of Anthropology. Vol. 7 (1991); Editor, The Ethnographer's Magic and Other Essays in the History of Anthropology (1992); and After Tylor: British Social Anthropology, 1888-1951 (1995).

His lecture will be on Saturday, November 5, at 12pm and will focus on his work and career.

The joint winners of the 2005 Forum for the History of the Human Sciences Prize award were Philippe Fontaine and Mark Solovey. Fontaine's article, entitled "Blood, Politics, and Social Science: Richard Titmus and the Institute of Economic Affairs. 1957-1973," was printed in Isis, vol. 93 (3), 401-434, September 2002. Solovey's article, entitled, "Riding Natural Scientist's Coattails onto the Endless Frontier: The SSCR and the Quest for Scientific Legitimacy," appeared in the Journal for the History of the Behavioral Sciences, vol. 40 (4), 393-422, Fall 2004.

Mark Solovey received his Ph.D. in history of science and American history from the University of Wisconsin, Madison, taught at Arizona State University West, and is now an independent scholar living in Cambridge, MA. Philippe Fontaine is a professor in the Economics Department of the Ecole Normale Supérieure de Cachan, in France, and the Ludwig Lachmann Research Fellow of the Department of Philosophy, Logic and Scientific Method at the London School of Economics and Political Science.

written in English and published during the period 1 January 2002 through 31 December 2005. Topical areas can include, but are not limited to, histories of psychology, psychiatry, anthropology, sociology, and social statistics. Works that are primarily in the histories of medicine or education are not eligible, unless they are strongly tied to the history of the social/behavioral/human sciences. Edited collections, anthologies, or textbooks are not eligible. Submissions will be judged on the basis of their scholarly character, depth of research, and the importance of their contribution to the field. Submissions can be made by publishers or authors. Two copies of each entry must be received by the committee chair by 31 October 2005. Final page proofs may be used for books to be published after 31 October and before 1 January 2006. If a final page proof is submitted, a bound copy of the entry must be received no later than 15 January 2006. No late submissions will be accepted.

The author of the winning book will receive $500 plus up to $300 in travel expenses to attend the 2006 Annual Meeting of Cheiron, where the prize will be awarded. Announcements of the award will also be widely circulated. Two copies of each entry, clearly labeled "2006 Cheiron Book Prize," must be mailed directly to:

By 1973, when Cheiron met at State University of New York College of Arts and Sciences at Plattsburg for its fifth meeting, it seemed likely that the society would continue and invitations to host were plentiful. Several organizational issues had been

members.)

So What's a "Review Committee"?

In its early years Cheiron was deliberately maintained as an informal society to support scholarship in the behavioral and social sciences. The first meeting, held in 1969 at Princeton University at the invitation of Julian Jaynes, brought together again many of those who had attended the NSF institute held at the University of New Hampshire the previous summer and were dedicated to encour aging and sharing their research efforts, joined by others who supported the same goal. There the group was invited by John Popplestone and Marian McPherson to the University of Akron for another meeting in May 1970.

At that second meeting there were proposals to continue meeting annually and invitations were received from members in New York City and in Canada. At the business meeting in Akron it was decided that Cheiron should not have any regular officers other than the host for each annual meeting, who would serve as chairman and appoint a conference committee to assist with program planning, and a secretary to be elected every three years. (Membership then stood at fifty-five, and dues were set at $5 with a $3 reduction for the five students raised and there were calls for attention to be paid to providing some organizational structure to direct future activities. Hence, a Structure Committee consisting of Mary Henle, Jacques Quen, and Rand Evans was appointed and charged. At the 1974 meeting in New Hampshire the Structure Committee recommended the formation of five committees, each with specific duties: Review Committee, Program Committee, Local Arrangements Committee, Finance Committee, and Publications Committee. After considerable discussion (the business meeting being arguably the most lively session in those early years), the Review Committee was established, that committee to include six members, with the first committee to be selected by a mail ballot. The Review Committee was charged to evaluate aspects of each meeting and make recommendations to future program and local arrangements chairs, suggest slates of candidates for elected committees or make appointments as needed, recommend meeting sites to the membership for approval, prepare annual budgets for member approval, oversee expenditures from the treasury to support annual meetings, and seek outside funding for meetings. This action combined the functions of the recommended Finance Committee with those of the Review Committee, which in effect established the Review Committee as an executive committee. The other three committees, to be appointed, were also approved.

Ian Nicholson was elected as a Fellow of the American Psychological Association, Division 26, August 2005.

As newly installed Editor of History of Psychology, Jim Capshew is seeking ad hoc reviewers for manuscript submission to the journal. If you would like to serve, please submit your name and areas of expertise.

Lewis Lipsitt has written a chapter for a book edited by D. Pillemer and S.H.White, published in 2005, Developmental Psychology and Social Change: Research, History and Policy, Cambridge University Press. Lipsitt's chapter is titled "Ignoring Behavioral Science: Practices and perils."

Adrian Brock (University College Dublin), Johann Louw (University of Cape Town), and Willem van Hoorn (University of Amsterdam), have edited the volume Rediscovering the History of Psychology: Essays Inspired by the Work of Kurt Danziger (New York, Boston, Dordrecht, London, Moscow:Kluwer Academic / Plenum Publishers, 2004). Author's include Kurt Danzinger, Andrew Winston, Irmingard Staeuble, Hans van Rappard, Betty M. Bayer, Richard Walsh-Bowers, Pieter J. van Strien, Henderikus J. Stam, and the editors.

Review Committee

Continued from page 3 The first Review Committee was determined by a mail ballot that was conducted in the summer and fall of 1974. It included Otto Marx and Michael Wertheimer (to serve one-year terms), Ted Carlson and Robert Watson (two-year terms), and Julian Jaynes and John Popplestone (three-year terms). Sixty-six ballots were returned, representing 31% of paid-up members. Since the establishment of the Review Committee, its chair (normally a third-year member) has moderated the annual business meeting. With two new members elected each year, sixty-three members have been elected to the Review Committee, with several serving more than one term. The 2005-2006 Review Committee includes Miki Takasuna, Ingrid Farreras, Emily Cahan, Sam Parkovnick, Elizabeth Johnston, and Christopher Green. Presently the responsibilities of the RC are essentially those established in 1974.

(b) Alexandra Rutherford and Wade Pickren, Program Chairs. Forty-three papers were submitted; thirty-two were accepted, four were rejected and seven were accepted as posters; three of the seven agreed. There were five symposium proposals; all were accepted. Seven posters were received; all were accepted. Three papers were accepted, but did not come. There were forty-nine papers in all. Alexandra Rutherford made a motion to thank the Office for History of Science and Technology at Berkeley; it was seconded by Tony Stavely and passed unanimously. John Carson made a motion to thank the Program Chairs; it was seconded by Sarah Igo and passed unanimously.

(c) Ian Nicholson, Cheiron Electronic Communications. The Website and Listserv are fine; the Website had 3000 hits and the Listserv is glitch free. Ian would like to post a more complete history of Cheiron, asking for old programs not on the site and past officers of Cheiron. John Carson made a motion to thank Ian Nicholson; it was seconded by Chris Green and passed unanimously.

(d) Daniela Barberis, Cheiron Newsletter. Daniela was not present. David Robinson reported, asking more people to ask for the Newsletter by e-mail to save money. Tony Stavely made a motion to thank Daniela Barberis; it was seconded by John Carson and passed unanimously.

New Book Series in History of Psychological Theories

Dear Colleagues who are interested in the theory in history of psychology:

I would like to inform you that the first two volumes of a new series entitled Library of the History of Psychological Theories published by Springer, The Language of Science, Inc 233 Spring St. New York, New York 10013 is now published.

The first volume is entitled Perception and Illusion:Historical Perspectives by Nicolas J. Wade of the University of Dundee UK. The second volume is on the History of Critical Psychology by Thomas Teo of York University.

Four other volumes are expected to be published sometime during the year 2006. The first of these four is due to be published in January 2006 entitled The Bifurcation of the Self: The history and theory of dissociation and its disorders (now in press) by Robert Rieber of Fordham University and CUNY.

The other three volumes are due later on in 2006. The first will be on the history of dynamic theories of personality, written by Eugene Taylor of Harvard Cambridge, MA. The second will be on the relationship between psychology and religion by Graham Richards of the British Psychological Society UK.. The last will be a book on the History and Theory of Language and Cognition written by Arthur Blumenthal, affiliated with Berkeley College and The Graduate Faculty of The New School for Social Research. New York.

These will constitute the first five volumes of projected ten volume series. We are seeking proposals by interested scholars who are willing to write approximately a 200 page book on any of the following topics: 1) History and Theory of the Concept of Memory in Psychology; 2) History and Theory of Intelligence in Psychology; 3) History and Theory of Social Psychology

If any of you are interested or know someone that is interested in writing a book for this series. please contact Robert W. Rieber at rwrieber@yahoo.com and I will be glad to give you any further information that could help with your decision.

I eagerly await to hear from anyone who is interested, R. W. Rieber Series Editor

Job Opportunities at Penn State

The College of the Liberal Arts at Penn State invites applications for a tenure-stream appointment, rank open, in its innovative intercollege program in science, technology, ethics, and medicine in contemporary society. Applications are welcome from candidates with degrees in Science, Technology, and Society or in a pertinent discipline within the humanities or social sciences.

This position is part of Penn State's, and the College of the Liberal Arts', commitment to research, teaching, and outreach in the areas of science and technology policy, public health and environmental policy, and ethical inquiry in these fields. The successful candidate will play a central role in the expansion and development of a robust intercollege program designed to augment Penn State's strengths in basic and applied fields of science and technology. She or he will also be involved in programs that strengthen the Rock Ethics Institute's initiatives in the area of ethics and policy in science, technology, and medicine.

The Program seeks candidates with expertise in the study of the relationship between contemporary society and science, medicine, and/or technology. Areas of research may include the ethical and social impact of biotechnology, engineering, environmental sciences, human sciences, and/or information sciences. The successful candidate must be able to work knowledgeably and effectively with researchers in basic and applied fields of science, technology, and/or medicine relevant to her or his area of specialization.

Ph.D. required along with evidence of research strength and ability to offer a range of courses at the undergraduate and graduate level in the program in science, technology, medicine, and ethics in society. Please send application letter, full curriculum vitae, sample publications, and letters of recommendation to: Chair, STEMS Search Committee The Pennsylvania State University Box GE, 111 Sparks Building University Park, PA 16802

Review of applications for both positions begins on November 15 and will continue until the position is filled. Penn State is committed to affirmative action, equal opportunity, and the diversity of its workforce. Continued on page 7
